February brings exciting Lunar New Year festivities! Many Asian cultures celebrate Lunar New Year in February and see it as a time to reunite with family. While spending time with family has changed a lot, you can still connect virtually and try our QSLA Lunar New Year activity together! You can also attend a storytime featuring Alex’s Good Fortune by Benson Shum on 2/13. Click here for more info.

Is your little one curious about all things slimy, gooey, and sticky? The Natural History Museum and Nickelodeon have partnered together to explore the science of slime and bring you cool facts about all the gooey things that exist out in nature.

This activity has tons of possibilities, no wrong answers, and mixes creativity and fine motor skills! You’ll need an ice tray, egg container, or muffin tin, plus small items such as dried beans, buttons, or coins. Your child can then sort the items by color, size, or whatever pattern they like. If your child is a little older you can include counting or even create your own game!

Find even more resources at qualitystartla.org